The Suffering Servant, as Recorded in Isaiah 53 (Bibliotheca Sacra Book 51) W.W. Martin

W.W. Martin offers a thorough exposition of the familiar “Suffering Servant” passage from Isaiah the prophet. Although somewhat technical at times (strophes and tritichs, for example, simply refer to the stanzas within the chapter’s poetic structure), the main point of the article is that the “Arm of the Lord” must refer to a specific person, and it necessarily points ahead to a prophecy yet to be fulfilled. Martin clearly states his case that the “man of sorrows” was still to come, in keeping with Isaiah’s vision of the promised Messiah.
